This weekend, Ocean Galleries hosts their first digital art exhibit by groundbreaking artist Stephen Harlan, whose gorgeous art is both captivating and mesmerizing. With a long history of living on and enjoying the water, Harlan began dabbling in digital art design while working on graphic presentations for his employer more than thirty years ago, and has since become a leading innovator in this unique genre of art.

Like a traditional artist, Harlan creates art with brushes, only his tools are all electronic. Depending on the look he aspires to achieve, he has brushes that can help him depict oils, acrylics, watercolors, and pastels. While some artists will recreate a scene that they have visited, all of Harlan’s artwork stems from his imagination and, in many cases, places he has visited. One of the other unique aspects of Harlan’s art is the material he uses. A favorite of Harlan’s is a metallic canvas with specks of silver in it, which he finds transposes his images well. He also uses a high gloss aluminum material that presents the art in a high definition format. The material is very lightweight and will never oxidize or corrode, making it a popular format for boat owners.

The exhibition is FREE and open to the public with all artwork available for acquisition. For more information, call 609-368-7777 or visit OceanGalleries.com
